

The topic is of lively interest because of the Administration's vigorous enforcement of the antitrust laws and because of provisions in a pending bill introduced by Senator Estes Kefauver compelling the licensing of patents on new drugs after three years.

Eleventh Report Describes Activities

RECENT ACTIVITIES of the Foundation are described in the eleventh Report to Members, published this month. It includes photographs and reports on Foundation events, people, research and other activities.

Law Student Wins Award

JERRY COHEN, a senior in The George Washington University Law School, was recipient of the first Patent Office Society Student Award, presented annually for the best paper by a student in the Seminar and Lecture Series conducted by the Foundation. Mr. Cohen received a citation and honorarium of $100, contributed by the Society. His paper is published in this issue of the Journal.

Book Contributions Invited

With the increasing requests for information and use of the Foundation library, we believe we should bring to the attention of our readers, once again, the need for additional reports, periodicals, books and manuscripts. This material is being arranged and indexed for the use of students, researchers and professional people. We ask you to contribute second copies, from your personal collection, of publications related to the Foundation's fields of interest.
